

Pima County's Sullivan Jackson Employment Center (SJEC) was founded in 1986 to respond to the employment and training needs of homeless men and women entering the workforce. SJEC is the only program of its kind in Arizona and one of a handful of such programs in the nation. Primarily supported by U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development funding, SJEC has been a pioneer in developing effective approaches to assist homeless individuals and families seek and maintain self-sufficiency.

THE GOALS OF THE CENTER ARE

- To increase the skill levels of homeless participants seeking full-time employment
- To provide extended job training opportunities to homeless participants, especially youth
- To work within the continuum of care to provide transitional opportunities to working men, women and families
- To provide post-placement supportive services or aftercare to enhance job retention and career advancement

COMMUNITY NEED

A leading cause of homelessness is the inability of poor people to acquire and/or maintain employment skills necessary for meaningful employment and affordable housing.

Those who are unemployed due to lack of skill are most vulnerable to becoming homeless. The ability to maintain a decent job is critical to preventing homelessness. However, the barriers to job search for a homeless person can be almost insurmountable, and for those with marginal skills or experience, employment opportunities are limited.

Obtaining a decent job and the ability to maintain that employment is the necessary and critical final step that a homeless person must take to return to mainstream society. The ongoing support of a comprehensive employment program is crucial to help this population overcome multiple employment barriers and succeed in the world of work.

This is an Equal Opportunity Employer/Program.

Auxiliary aids and services are available upon request to individuals with disabilities.
